

SOVA'S LEGEND

Dusk of the Gods

Issue 5: Ziamgard

Revolution HQ. Day 29.
A few hours until the uprising.

We plant cylinders in every administrative building. Detonate on signal.

What about people? Will they be hurt?

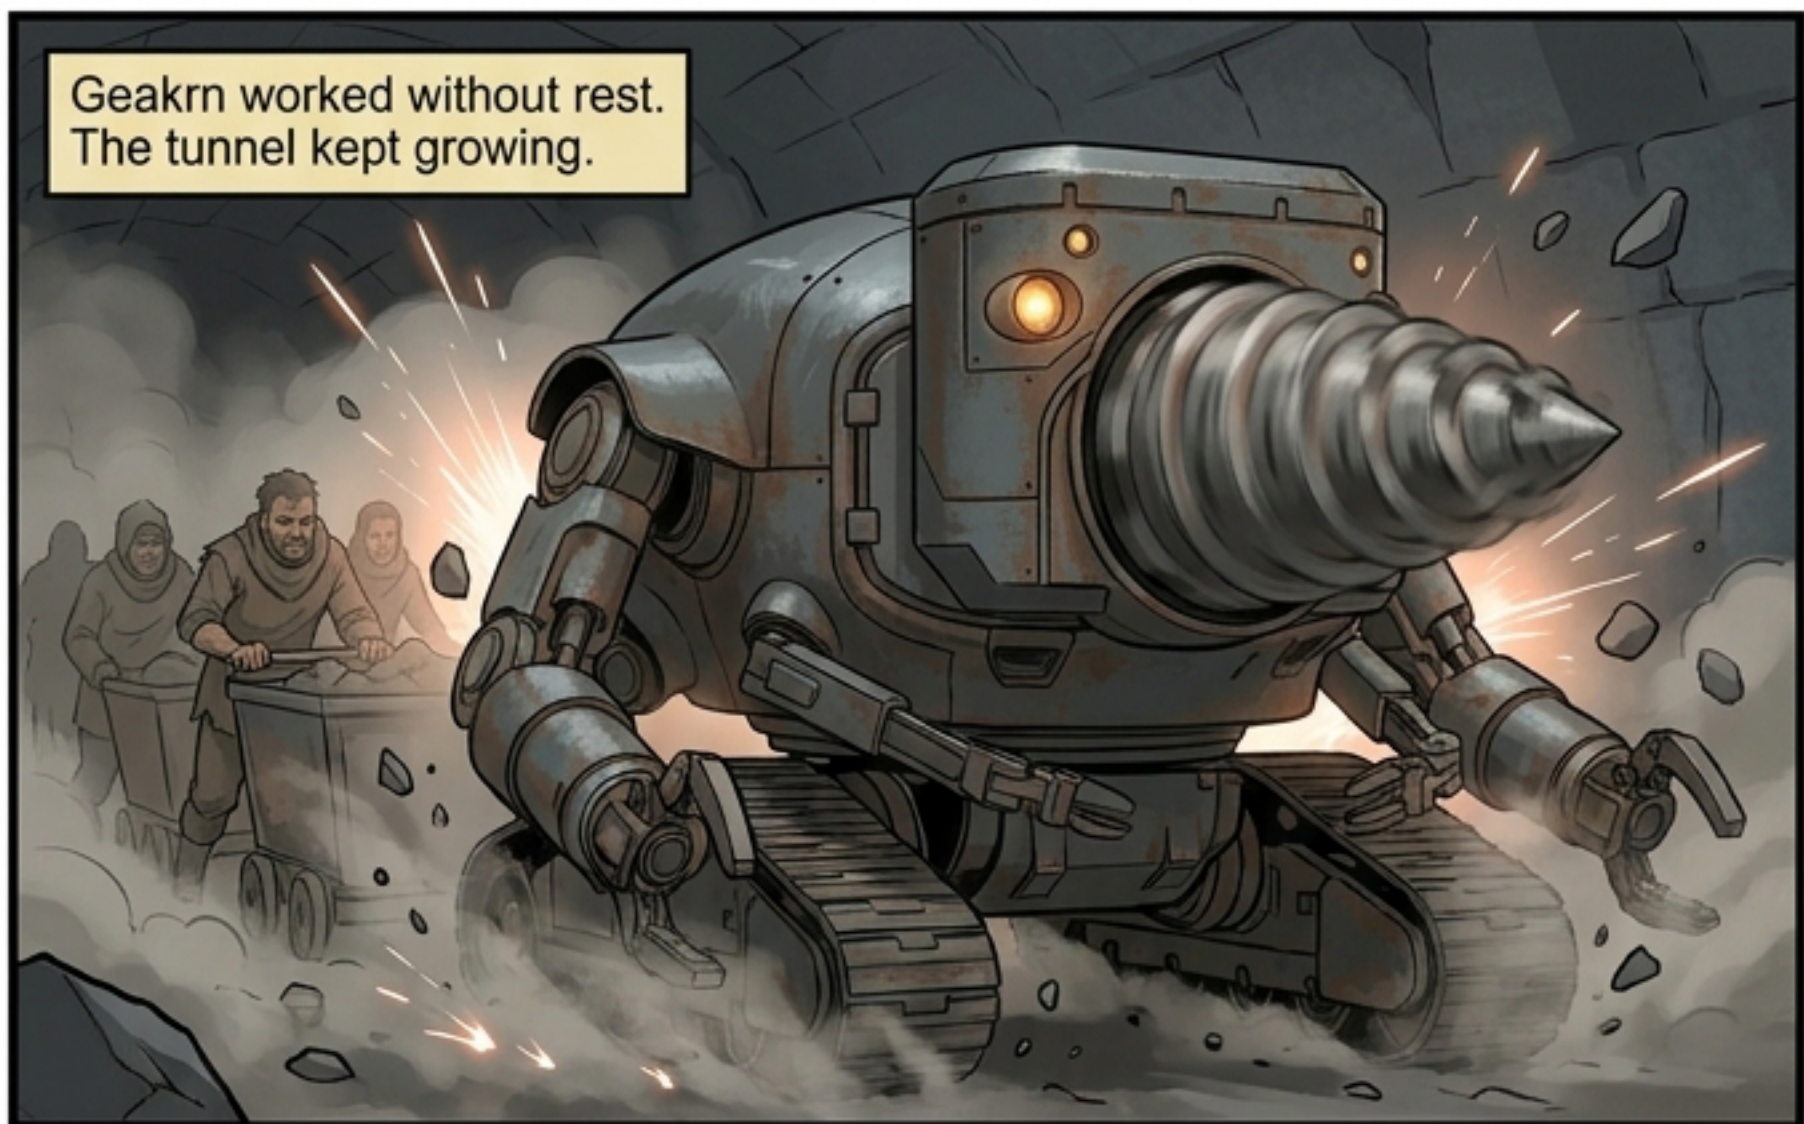

The officials — yes. That's the point.

They weren't entirely sure why they were doing this. They had been warned it was dangerous.

Geakrn worked without rest.
The tunnel kept growing.

Under the debris they found a food stockpile.
The cans were still good.

Sova ate without stopping for several hours. He had not been this happy in a long time.

Then he suffered from a stomach upset for a very long time. But the smile didn't leave.

At the calculated moment, Rakushka detonated all the administrative buildings.

The rebels led the crowd, throwing cans of food as they went.

Patrols, seeing the strength,
switched sides without delay.

The elite's youth tried to escape on Sova's ship. The systems blocked entry.

Rakushka hospitably closed the hatch behind them. The ship launched.

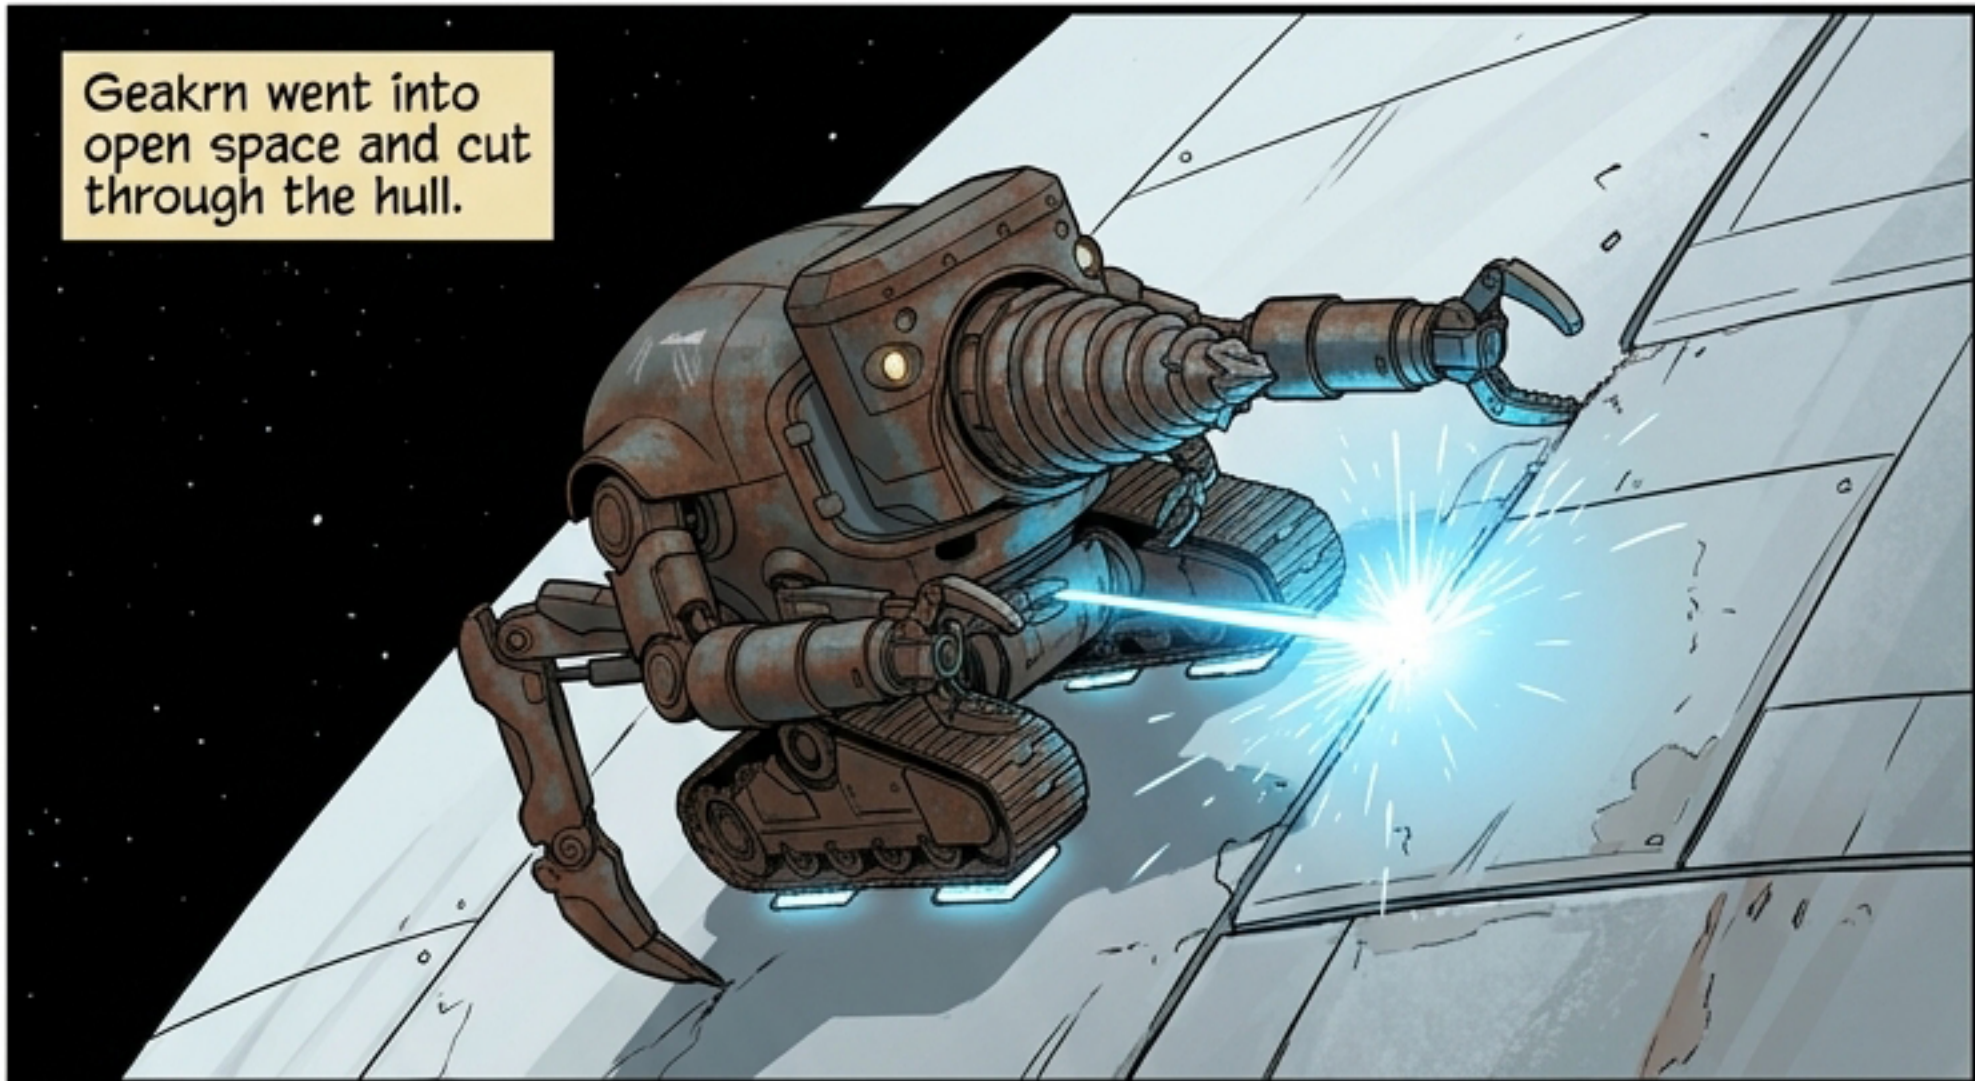

We're leaving? Right now?

No. We need to get Arpid.

Geakrn went into open space and cut through the hull.

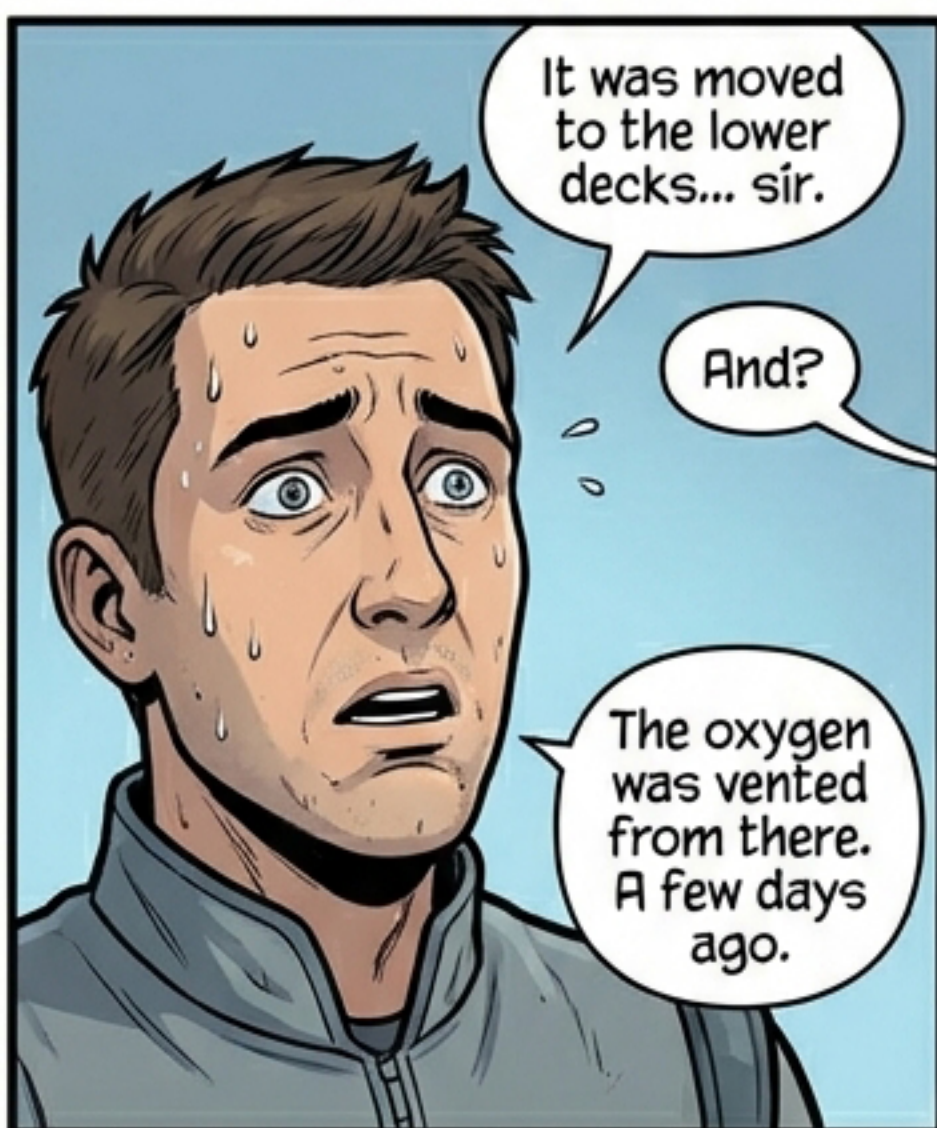

Sova performed the leisurely walk of a high-ranking politician.

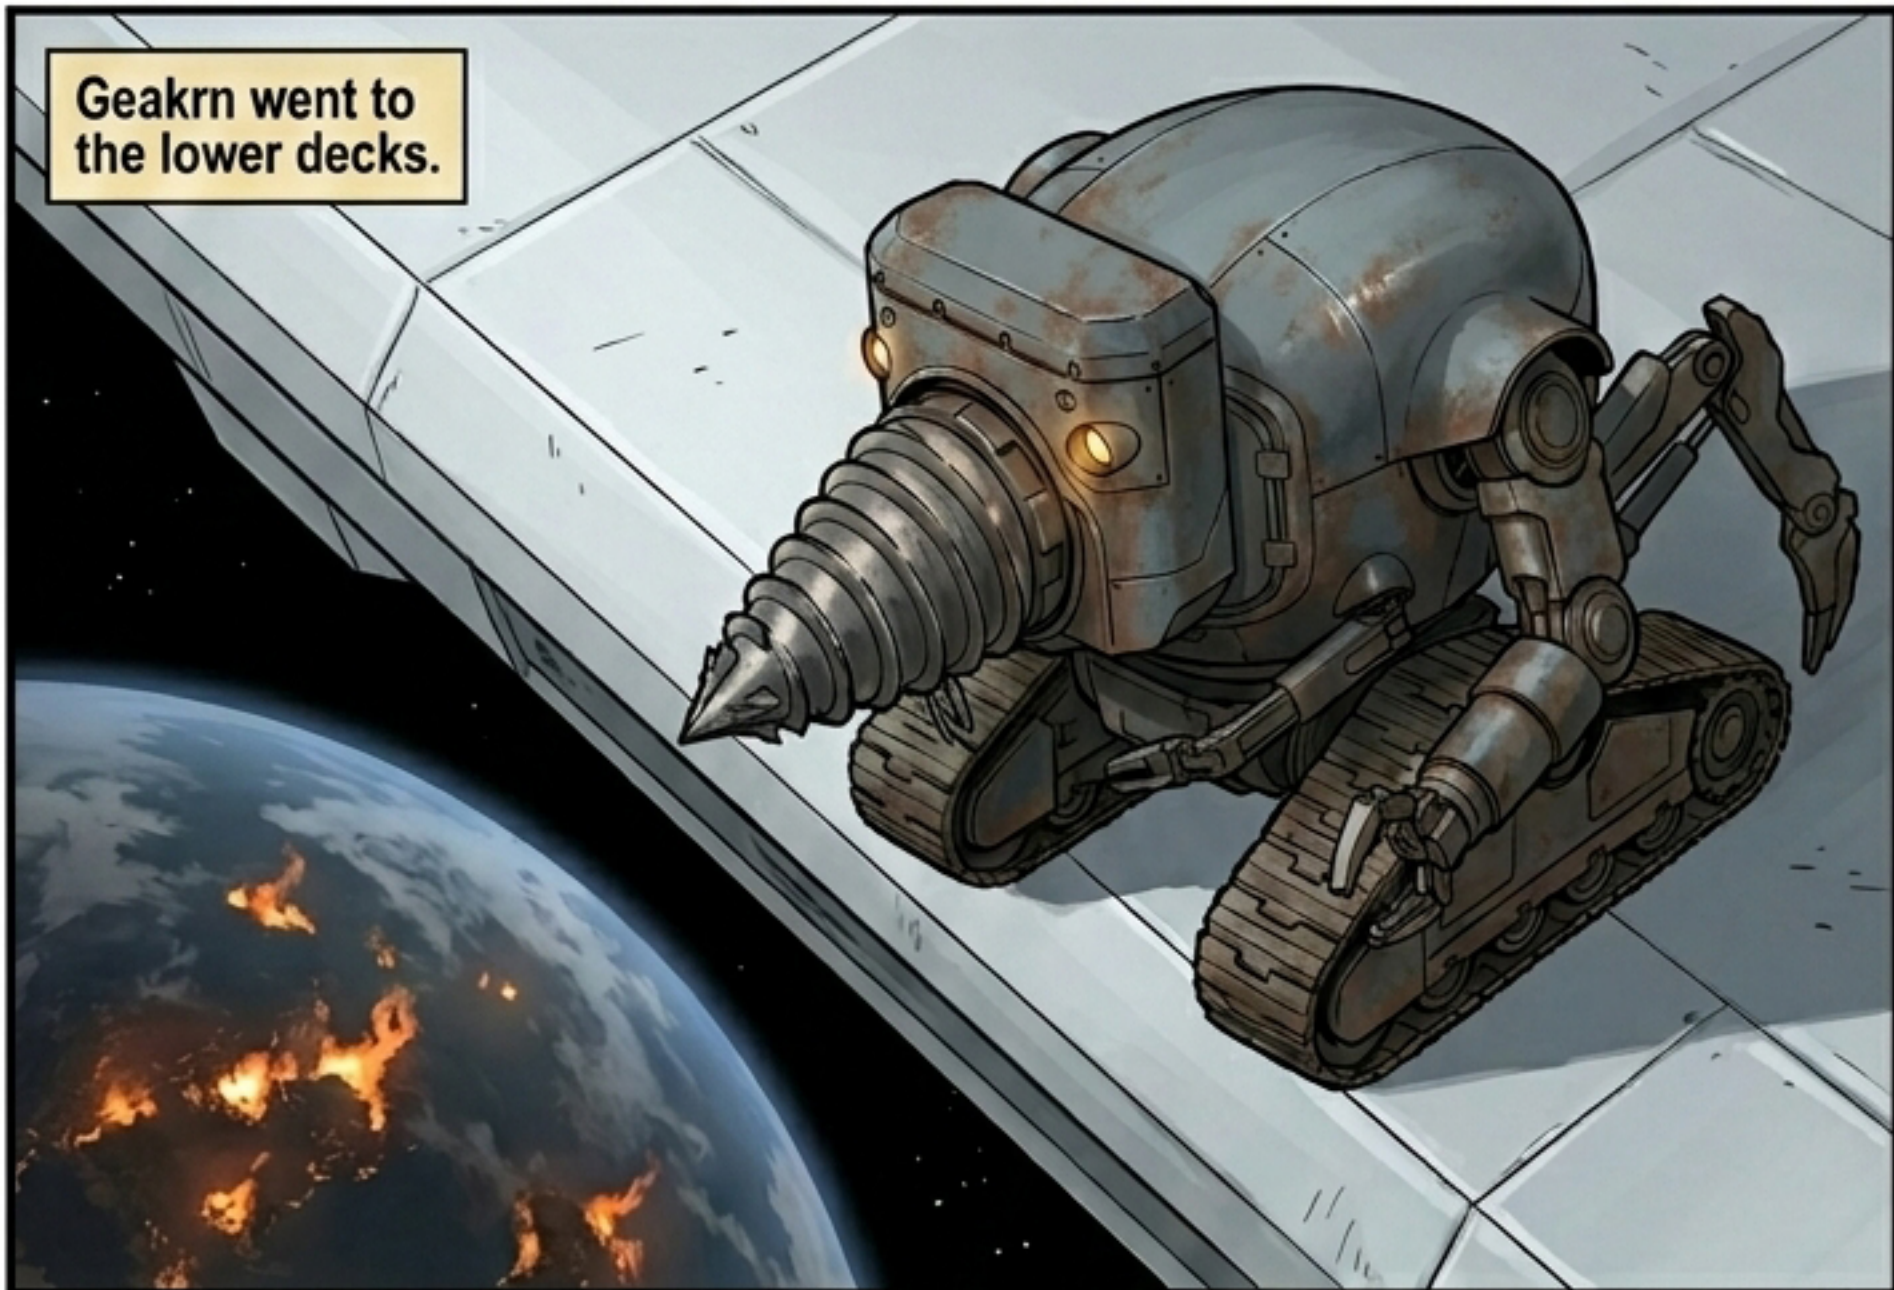

He took a glass, drained it, loaded a plate with delicacies, and walked on with his mouth full.

Geakrn went to the lower decks.

Geakrn returned with the Arcturian. He was alive. Somehow.

The ruler called in the pirates.
They began bombardment.

They launched at the last moment.

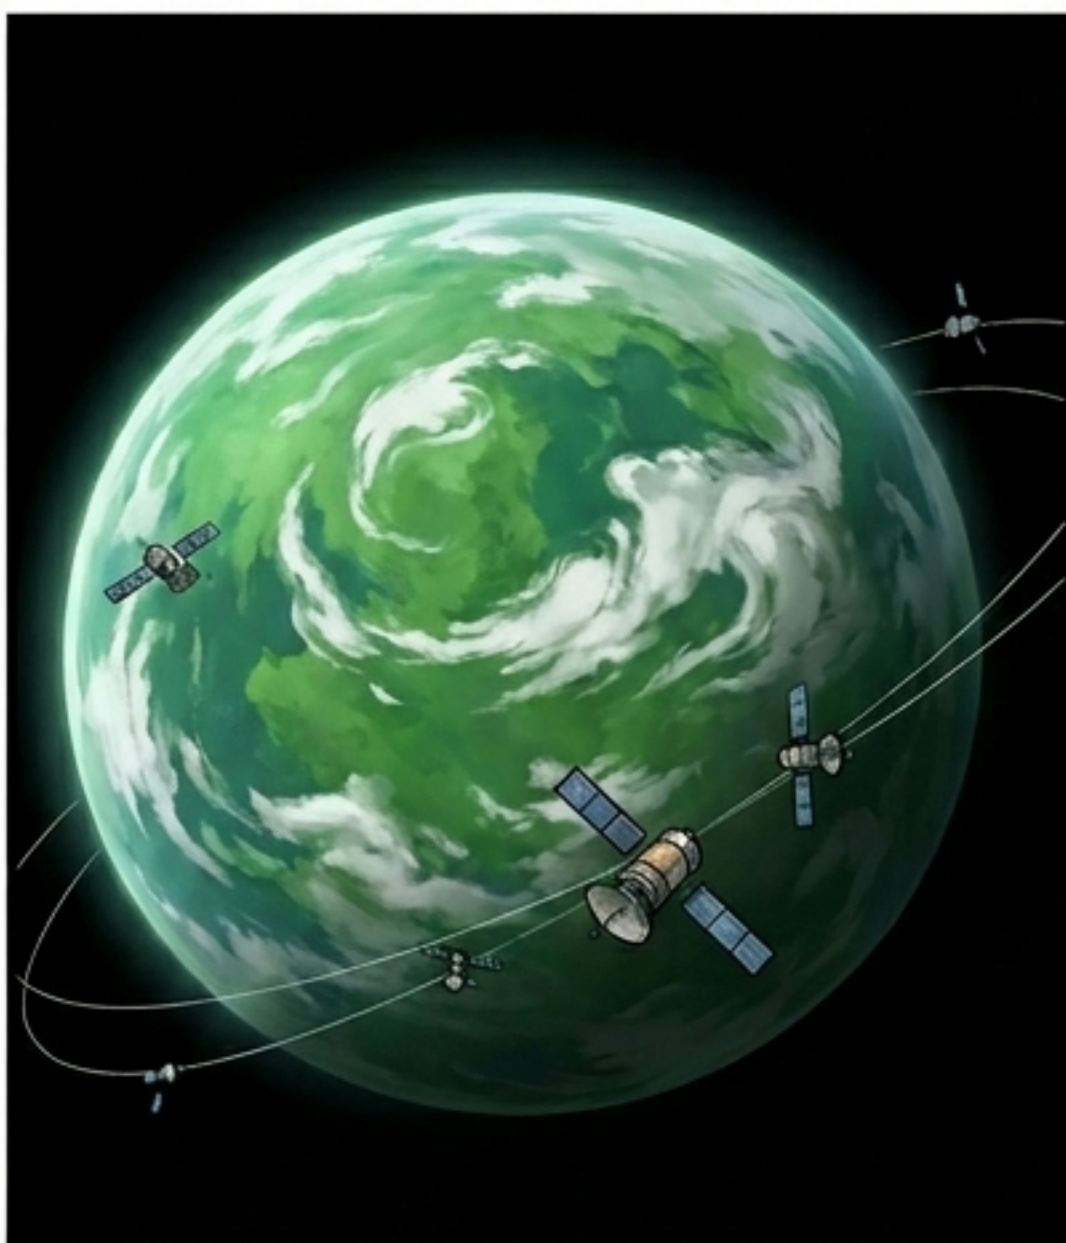

The ship entered the Gate.

Day 33.
A new system.
New problems.

Where
are we?

Ziamgard
system.
Breathable
atmosphere.

The air was fresh.
The droppings: all colors
of the rainbow.

He ordered everything
his body could process.

Eight hours later he was carried out dead drunk, stuffed full, and perfectly content.

The stupid smile didn't leave even after two days in the bathroom.
